1 This table provides information for one family type; see each province for further details.

2 There are new subsidy eligibility levels, effective January 2005. See NB section for details.

3 As of 2001, Quebec now provides publicly funded services rather than providing subsidies to selected families.

4 In Ontario, municipalities determine eligibility level using a provincial needs test, in which income is only one factor. Province-wide information is not available.

5 Saskatchewan determines eligibility for subsidies based on gross income.

6 In the Northwest Territories, a needs test is used in which income is only one factor. Territory-wide information is not available.

7 In Nunavut, a needs test is used in which income is only one factor. Territory-wide information is not available.
